Comments

Having Prof Razeghi at 9am is a great way to start your day.. Her enthusiasm in teaching the class and solid-state is certainly unparalleled in this world. This class is not designed to weed out the strong/weak. It's just a class for you to learn so sit back and absorb as much as you can. / Not a bad class, but a bit too easy. Razeghi loves her students./ good course, great prof, interesting material/ I enjoyed this class, nothing too difficult if you just come to lectures and pay attention. Professor Razeghi's unbridled enthusiasm surpasses that of any other engineering professor I've had in McCormick. Make sure you take it with her./ razeghi is awesome/ Prof Razeghi is a great teacher. The material is hard to understand even in class and dry, and she teaches fast.. normally I would hate the class and wish it were over, however I actually found myself spending a lot of time in this class. She is proud of her research and is def in the top of the field and really wishes we could be into it as well. She is enthusiastic and at first it was hard to wake up for the class because it's at 9 am and she really makes people go, but in retrospect, it was good discipline training./ take 223 with razeghi! she's one of the best profs i've taken at nu who actually wants you to learn and do well! homeworks/tests/lectures/labs don't really match up at times, but it's a pretty easy a if you just try./ Best class I've taken so far. It gave me hope that not all Northwestern classes will inevitably suck the life out of you.
